HEACHAM

From your doorstep, the North Norfolk coast opens up with beaches, marshes, and village lanes in every direction. A couple of minutes' walk brings you to the west-facing shoreline at Heacham, one of the rare places on the east coast where you can watch the sun set directly over the sea. If you fancy something more adventurous, paddle board lessons at Hunstanton Paddleboarding are also nearby for a fun way to explore the coast from the water.

The King Charles III England Coast Path runs around the site, so you can step straight out onto a national coastal trail and walk south towards Snettisham and the RSPB reserve, or north towards Hunstanton and the striped cliffs of Old Hunstanton.
